

Today's Amur leopard enclosure, served during the interwar period as an enclosure for white bears, and then for Himalayan bears. In the second part of the building, where we can admire exotic invertebrates, there used to be a kitchen facility where animal meals were prepared.